The Castle of Perseverance, UNO's new amphitheater, was dedicated on Friday.

UNO Dedicates Amphitheater

By HEIDI HERMANSON

UNO's new amphitheater, the Castle of Perseverance, was dedicated Friday at a ceremony held in the amphitheater. Although rain seemed imminent, the weather cooperated for the dedication.

About 140 people were on hand to hear Andrew Leicester, the theater's designer, speak.

Leicester described the symbolism and significance of his design choices in the amphitheater.

The Castle of Perseverance is based on a medieval play of the same name. The purpose of the play was to "use the power of the arts to purify the human spirit," according to program notes.

The theater is a small brick semicircle with staggered retaining walls serving as seats.

The positioning of the semicircle was designed for maximum sun exposure as well as maximum shelter from the wind. Acoustically, the theater was designed to minimize noise from Dodge Street. A two-headed snake circles the top of the brick semicircle.

Leicester said the snake heads were the "guardians" of the theater space. In the mouth of one snake was a human head, in the mouth of the other a skull.

"These represent the life and death cycle," Leicester said. "I was the model for the head, which was done in a plaster cast."

The faces of five recent presidents peer out from the interior walls. Leicester, who is originally from England, said that the faces represented "America's aristocracy," noting that in monarch-ruled countries, royalty have their own special boxes in the theater, and like the kings and queens, the presidents could look down on the theater.

Consultants to Study Programs

By JULIE LARSEN

The University of Nebraska Board of Regents hired four consultants Friday to study whether the NU system's engineering programs meet the needs of the state and the Omaha area.

The four were chosen by consensus of both University of Nebraska-Lincoln and UNO chancellors and engineering faculty from both campuses, Regent Rosemary Skrupa of Omaha said.

The decision to hire a consultant was made at the September regents' meeting after hearing from professors, University of Nebraska-Lincoln administrators, and area business leaders.

Skrupa said the consultants' reputations were excellent, but the directions given to them did not address the real issue.

"In no place does it (directions) say should we re-establish a school of engineering at UNO," Skrupa said. "They dance around the issue. They are not prepared to directly face the issue."

She added that those involved should either "fish or cut the bait."

Skrupa had asked that the question be included in the instructions to the consultants, but her proposal failed. After her request, she said she was orally assured that the question will be addressed.

UNL has the only engineering college in the state. The UNO College of Engineering and Technology was merged with the UNL college in 1970.

The consultants are Donald N. Langenberg, chancellor of the University of Maryland system; John T. Christian, vice president of Stone and Webster Engineering Corp.; James E. Halligan, president of New Mexico State University; and Charles F. James, dean of the College of Engineering at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Other regents raised the question whether an engineering college should be established in the western part of the state.

"It was farcical," Skrupa said. "It was seriously a disservice to UNO."

Skrupa said accusations of UNO trying to be "divisive" and turn the engineering issue into a "quarrel between campuses" were false.

An example of some the questions the consultants will be asked:

• What are the instructional

Stabbing Raises Consciousness

By KATHARINE STOLTZFUS

A violent confrontation at UNO two weeks ago has called attention to the issue of sexual harassment on campus.

UNO student Danny R. Clark Jr., is accused of stabbing fellow student John Sharkey in both wrists during an argument motivated by Clark's alleged harassment of Sharkey's wife, Regina.

UNO Manager of Campus Security Charles Swank said that based on his experience, there are several ways to quickly discourage unwanted attention before it escalates into major problems.

"I think that on some occasions the individual who's receiving this unwanted attention is hesitant, they don't want to offend," Swank said. "I think that one thing the person needs to do is let it be

LIFT-UP Sponsors Events

By DORAINA A. HOOKS

This week UNO students have the opportunity to learn about problems associated with alcohol. UNO's alcohol and drug education program, Let's Intervene for Tomorrow-University Project II (LIFT-UP II) will be sponsoring a variety of events in honor of National Collegiate Awareness Week, Oct. 17-24.

"Our overall goal is to provide drug and alcohol education to students and work with other organizations to support the cause," said Gina Lattanzi, assistant project coordinator for LIFT-UP II.

Seminars, displays and information about drug and alcohol abuse will be on campus all week. Friday, LIFT UP II will feature "the wall," a place where students may come and write about how alcohol has touched their lives. The wall will be displayed and students are also welcome to read the stories and comments of other students.

"The wall is very powerful," Lattanzi said. "We had it last year and the response and participation was great."

Program Assistant

Lattanzi said the goal of LIFT-UP II is to work with community and campus organizations to assist and educate students about drug and alcohol dangers.

LIFT-UP II is funded through the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPSE), and the purpose is to implement a prevention program at UNO. LIFT-UP II, in conjunction with other drug and alcohol agencies, has activities planned for most of the fall season.

Where were you 25 years ago? Captain Wally Schirra remembers exactly where he was: orbiting the earth in the Apollo VII space craft.

Schirra was the keynote speaker at the Aviation 2000 Conference sponsored by the UNO Aviation Institute held Friday at the Peter Kiewit Conference Center.

Schirra recalled humorous anecdotes, shared ideas on the future of put together by the lowest bidder." His next command was the Gemini 6 spacecraft. The purpose of this mission was to connect with the already orbiting Gemini 7 capsule, testing the endurance of its two astronauts.

In 1968, Schirra commanded the Apollo VII space craft, practicing docking and orbiting rendezvous techniques. "We trained out the fear," said Schirra. "Everything was done again and again until perfection."

ing its successes as the TV show "Star Trek" was popular.

"People began to think that we were capable of the things they did on Star Trek," said Schirra. "They were disappointed when we couldn't."

The future of the space program is of great concern to Schirra. He sees the lack of developing new propulsion systems as the biggest problem facing the space program.

"We are at a dead end," he said. "It would take three years to go to the American space program, and answered questions from the audience.

Schirra graduated from the Naval Academy in 1945, and served as an exchange pilot with the Air Force in the Korean War. In April 1959, he was named one of seven astronauts to fly the Mercury space missions. On Oct. 1962, he orbited the earth six times in a flight that lasted 9 hours and 15 minutes.

The Mercury missions proved the American space program "could go up and come back down," said Schirra. "Everyone talks about going up, but forgets about coming back down."

When asked what his thoughts were just before lift off on his first flight, he said, "Just think, this is all Schirra attributed the success of the Apollo mission, which eventually sent man to the moon, to a national commitment towards space exploration. The military was used extensively by connecting "a big team of 300,000 people" essential to the takeoff and landing of the space capsules, said Schirra.

A great deal was gained by the Apollo mission beyond putting man on the moon. For example, it was discovered that water doesn't exist on the moon. The debate over what caused the craters on the moon was also settled.

"Some believed that volcanoes caused the craters, while others thought it to be outer space objects," said Schirra. "It was both."

The space program was achiev-

Mars with our current propulsion systems."

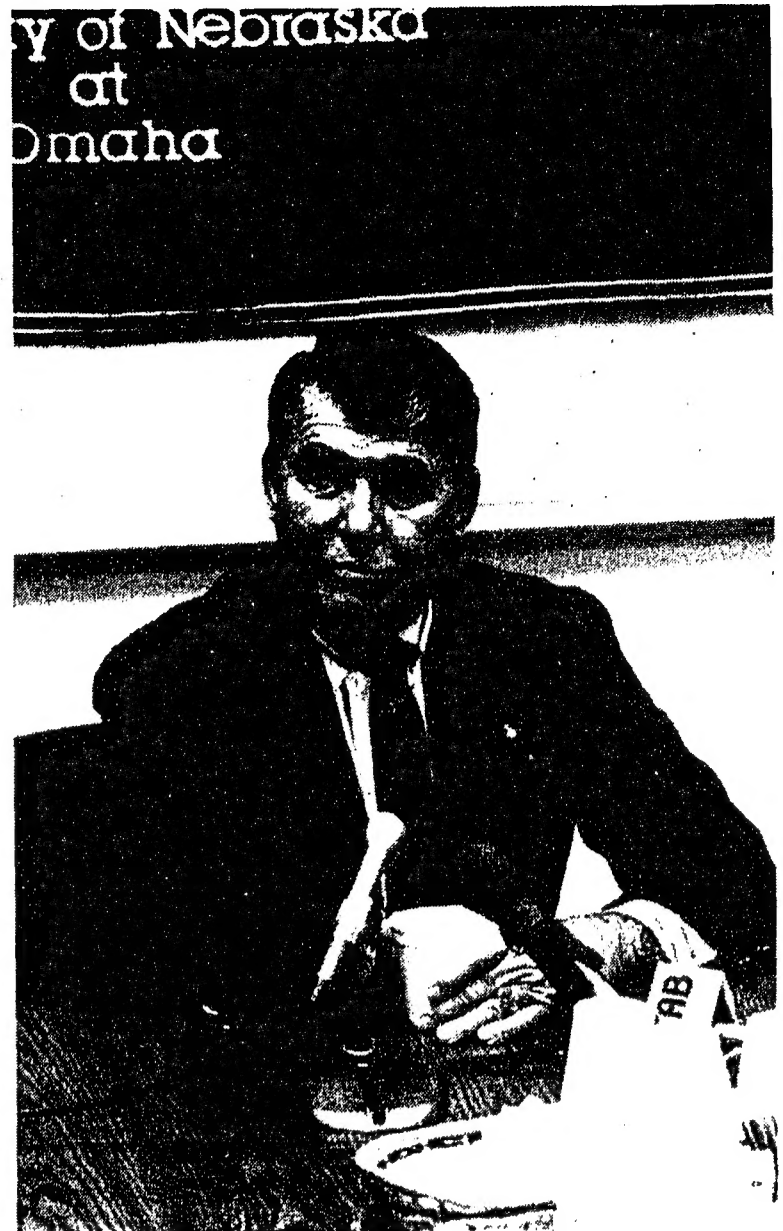

In his opinion, a mission to Mars is possible, however, it would take a great deal of research into new propulsion systems and the effects of long term confinement on humans in space.

Schirra was asked if he believed there to be other forms of life in outer space.

"Besides our sun, the next nearest star is 36,000 years away at the speed we went to the moon," he said. "So statistically, yes."

Although he is proud of his position in the history of space exploration, he keeps it all in perspective.

"I left earth three times," said Schirra, "And I found nowhere else I'd rather go."

Weber Approves $40,000 Fountain Project

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Chancellor Del Weber upheld a Student Senate decision last Wednesday and signed a proposal for $40,000 fountain project.

"Representative government has spoken on the issue," Weber said. "That's what I support."

Earlier this semester, the senate approved the project and Student President/Regent Jennifer Newhouse vetoed it. The senate overrode the veto.

The money for the fountain project would be taken from a Student Government reserve account, which is an accumulation of a percentage of student fees. Fountains would be located on the east and west ends of a mall area in front of the Student Center.

The project is scheduled to coincide with Student Center renovations next year. Weber's decision included some conditions on the project.

• $40,000 will be set aside for fountain purposes only.

• Student government will need to finalize plans for the project, including total costs of the project and written agreements.

• The project is subject to a review and a final proposal from the facilities committee on campus.

Sen. Heidi Hess, an author of the fountain proposal, said she is ecstatic about the approval.

"It's a relief because it's finally done," Hess said. "With the project, we were hoping to give students something that will benefit every student forever."

The faces were also a reference to the traditional theater masks, he said. The four "daughters," which are tiled vertical figures, are taken directly from the play and represent the virtues of humanity.

"Some people have told me they look like condoms," Leicester said.

"It is appropriate that The Castle of Perseverance is a morality play, because these structures serve as a serious reminder for the younger generation to practice safe sex."

After Leicester's remarks, the Moving Company, a dance troupe, performed an original "multicultural and intergenerational" piece entitled "Perseverance."

The modern-dance piece, which depicted the human being's will to survive in the face of great distress, utilized electronic music as well as sign language to communicate its message.

The cost of the amphitheater was $105,000, with $85,000 coming from the state's "1 percent for art program." According to state regulations, any building built with state funds must use 1 percent of its funding for artwork.

The rest of the funding came from a National Endowment for the Arts Grant.

A reception in the Fine Arts Building followed the ceremony.

Atmosphere and Some Insomnia

Since the age of 21, going to the bar has become an almost religious devotion for me. Each weekend, most Thursdays, and some Wednesdays, you'll find me drinking a stale draft and talking to strangers in some dimly lit tavern.

Over the course of these many evenings, I've found only one woman who was ever worth a damn. And even then, she was from out of town.

This woman and I, though hopelessly in love, spent much of our time together constructing elaborate stories of our first meeting. After all, no one is comfortable telling people they met in a bar.

"Oh, you guys'll never last," is too much for anyone to bear, and besides, it made us feel better to think we'd met somewhere other than Mickey Finn's, in Council Bluffs.

For about three weeks, we told people we met at a poetry reading. I never could keep a straight face through that one, being very much against poetry readings, and I don't think anyone believed us.

In the fourth week, we switched the story to a meeting at the '93 Youth Festival. That was good. Romantic. I was cold, camping beneath the stars with only a poncho, and she saw me shivering and offered to share a sleeping bag. It was quite popular, but a little too spooky for both of us.

Just when it appeared that we'd found the perfect story (squeezing musk melons in the produce section at Albertson's) she up and left me. She said she had to be back to New Mexico for school, or life, or an old boyfriend. I don't know. I didn't listen.

In the whole time we spent together, I'd never once set foot in a bar.

So here I am again, back to my old ways, moving ghostlike from bar to bar. Most nights, as I stumble home contemplating the hangover with which I'll pay so dearly in the morning, I wonder why I do it. I wonder why so many others do exactly the same thing.

"ATMOSPHERE," my friend Jim insists. "You go for the atmosphere."

He insists on saying this even though we're standing at the 18th Amendment, watching two drunk fat kids throwing footballs at the Quarterback Challenge. They keep throwing even when the game is over.

"Atmosphere?" I say.

"Well, maybe not," he answers.

If you'll excuse the use of metaphor, it's so much like a carnival game. You play and play, knowing fully you'll never win, but wanting to play anyway, wanting to give it just one more chance.

"We should go downtown," Jim says. "It's always better downtown."

So downtown we go. The Dubliner? No. Jones Street?

Nope. A parking space opens in front of Billy Frogg's, so it's Billy Frogg's for the rest of the night, and maybe Iowa if it comes to that.

A girl is puking by a hydrant as we get out.

"That's character," Jim says.

Inside, the bar is a tangle of people and smoke and drinks. I look for someone to talk to, and we talk, and before I know it, her boyfriend is stumbling back from the bathroom.

"Should we go?" Jim asks.

"I think so. Yes," I say.

It's nearly one in the morning. With the bartender screaming last call and the crowd milling toward the door, we make our exit.

"Are you tired?" Jim asks.

"No, not really tired," I say.

"So we're going to Iowa, then?"

"Why not?"

"You sure?"

"Yes. I'm wide awake. I don't feel like going home yet."

I reach into my pocket to check my money. Why not, I say to myself, it's only insomnia. Many must have it.

Discipline Increases Abuse

"If your mother wasn't out tramping around in bars with men, maybe you would have got your homework done."

I have read numerous commentaries in the newspaper about the sad state of the public school system. Most people feel the overall and basic downfall of today's school system is the inability of teachers to discipline students.

I emphatically disagree with this philosophy.

The above quote is an actual statement said to my brother by a teacher in front of an entire class, without fear of reprisal or lawsuit.

When I went to school in the '60s, the teachers I encountered had free reign with discipline. Both verbal and corporal discipline were used extensively and at the discretion of each individual teacher.

This so-called discipline made six very lonely, neglected and abused children further victimized. My family was dysfunctional. Both my parents were alcoholics and abusive.

Going to school was supposed to be the safest refuge we had. Instead, we received further physical and emotional abuse. Now doesn't that sound like the kind of school system you would like your children to attend?

Let's list some of the abuse endured by my siblings and myself. My oldest brother was beat, not spanked, with the terrible, unspeakable board of education which was a one inch thick wooden paddle. We were slapped by teachers. We had our hair pulled out in tufts, and they would also grab your ear and twist until you cried. My oldest brother was also hit over the head with a cup of hot coffee which shattered on impact and scalded him.

Is this the discipline people crave? Why not feed a couple of Christians to the lions while we are at it, or how about burning some witches?

Because we were a poor, dysfunctional family, we were treated like lepers.

Did we attend Catholic school? Unfortunately, I have to say yes.

The early years of my three oldest siblings' education included attending a Catholic school until my parents could no longer afford it.

One of the worst incidents of this wonderful discipline happened to my brother when he repeatedly defied a nun. She told him to place his hands down on a desk, palms flat, and proceeded to hit his knuckles with the metal edge of a ruler until they were a bloody mess.

Then she told him to ask for God's forgiveness.

Of course this lady, who just cruelly and savagely beat a child, didn't need forgiveness, did she? Where were all the social agencies to protect children? As far as we knew, they did not exist.

What did exist for me was a kind of "Lord of the Flies" society where bigger and more powerful individuals terrorized, abused and tortured those less powerful. Our lives were meaningless to society because we were white trash.

The school also had a dress code which was sexually discriminatory towards girls.

Girls were required to wear dresses during school, even in the dead of winter.

Sure, we were allowed to wear pants to and from school to keep our legs from freezing off. You probably heard your parents say "we had to walk miles and miles to and from school through snow, rain, sleet and hail. That's the way it was and we liked it." In those good old days, parents didn't drive their kids anywhere.

Once at school, girls had to go to the cloak room and remove their offensive manly attire before entering the classroom. The first thing we did upon re-entering our classroom was to recite "The Pledge Of Allegiance." Does anyone else, besides me, remember how it goes?

"I pledge Allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the republic, for which it stands, one nation, under God, indivisible with liberty and justice for all."

Unless you were in my school system and unlucky enough to be from a poor, dysfunctional family.

That's the problem with allowing individuals the freedom of disciplining children. These people are only human and bring their prejudices and biases with them.

Allowing teachers to discipline students would only increase the abuse of poor and minority students who would be the recipients of a majority of the punishment.

So to those people who say the only thing children are lacking in their education at school is discipline: I say bullshit. The biggest problem with today's school systems is poor parenting. Parents expect everyone else to do their job.

What children need from school is acceptance and a positive learning environment—Period. End of class.

Ad Disagreeable

Dear Editor,

It has been brought to my attention by a distraught student that the Gateway of Sept. 28 carried a disagreeable ad from Dimensions Salon. It depicts a "crazy" person in a straight jacket.

This is an affront to ex-patients, patients and family members who have number one experience with such particles of torture. Judge on Merit

Dear Editor:

The bashing of the Pope and the attack on gay and lesbian people as well as an attack on Jews would not be surprising if it weren't happening at a university. The politically correct and the religious right have something in common; ignorance.

The vast majority of Jews in Europe were no better off than most Europeans. Those that did become wealthy from banking, became wealthy because Christianity considered it a sin to loan money and charge interest. The sin is called usury. If you are Christian and have a bank account, according to certain interpretations of the Bible, you are committing a sin. The Bible became a way to attack people. The very quotes which are used to attack homosexuals come from the same books in the Bible which contain quotes used to condemn Jews. Nazi Germany made use of the Bible to exterminate both Jews and homosexuals.

The use of the word "homosexual" in the Bible tends to blind people to the fact that the bible does not condemn all homosexual acts but only promiscuity, bigamy and pagan sexual rituals. To say otherwise would be to say all heterosexual men rape women, therefore heterosexuality is wrong.

What is sad, is many gays and lesbians are anti-religion, and many of the religious right are homophobic and both are ignorant of anti-Catholic to the point they fail to see they are using the same script of the anti-Catholic know-nothing party. Insert any group in place of "so-and-so" and you will recognize the script: "So-and-so has a secret international agenda to recruit our children, and will molest and abuse them to make them slaves. So and so are a parasite of American society and are bent on destroying out God given freedom and will do so by taking over our educational system. So-and-so is loyal only to the anti-Christ and has a great amount of power to destroy us so we must destroy them first. So-and-so are not like us."

Some day people will learn to judge individuals on their merit and not on their religious beliefs or sexual orientation or some fool's conspiracy theory.

Cartoon 'Not Cool'

Dear Editor:

I am surprised at your choice of front page cartooning, namely the "sports" cartoon in the Oct. 8 issue of the Gateway.

I thought we were supposed to be easing up on the racial stereotypes. The jive-talking black athlete (disguised as the UNO mascot) putting the wimpy "Indian brave" in his place, (back on the Morningside College "reservation" one assumes) is just plain not cool.

Not only does the defeated "brave" proclaim "peace" with one hand extended in the old mistaken idea of Native Americans as the only aggressors on the plains (he doesn't really mean "peace," he is only intimidated), but as some readers may know, there has been a lot of objection to cutie "Indians" as sports mascots in recent times anyway. As I learned from reading newspapers such as Indian Country Today and the Winnebago, Neb., newspapers, as well as talking to locals on the "res" 90 miles north of Omaha (The Winnebago-Omaha nations, also known as Thurston County, Neb.), there has been a real objection to calling Sioux City's baseball team the "Sioux." I imagine Morningside College has had some flack also.

So good old UNO started using a bovine instead of an Indian for a sports mascot several years ago — still, do we have to turn him into a stereotyped character to make a point about winning a football game? I think not.

Svehla Prejudiced

Dear Editor,

I am writing in reference to the disappearance to the Gateway from the College Business Administration Building on Tuesday, Oct. 12. I witnessed a young man who I could not identify taking a stack of Gateways out of the bin inside the south entrance to the CBA. At the time, I thought nothing of it except to think he was taking the Gateway to his friends.

I later heard that the newspaper had disappeared from other localities on campus. Did this have anything to do with the editorial in the paper supporting Matt Schulz for student president/regent? If so, I am disappointed with the students of this university who would stoop so low. Every student here has the opportunity to be informed and make up his or her own mind as to the candidates' qualifications and, certainly, the Gateway has the right to endorse a candidate.

In the same issue there was a letter by Michael Svehla in which he missed the whole point of the issue regarding homosexuals and equal rights. Why is the percentage so important to him? Does he feel better about himself hating only one percent of the men (notice he didn't mention women)?

He says he does not hate homosexuals, not fear them, but wants these "morally bankrupt, miserable destroyers of society" to crawl back into their closet. Mr. Svehla, maybe you had better look inside yourself and try to find out why the fact that there are, always will be and always have been homosexuals in society is so bothersome to you.

The point is not percentage, the point is that they deserve the same rights as everyone else — to live in peace, without fear of reprisal for who or what they are. It seems to me that prejudice against homosexuals is the last "acceptable" prejudice left for narrow-minded people like Mr. Svehla.

I hope the "good students of UNO," as he put it, would not be further educated by people like Mr. Svehla, but would use the opportunity of a university relationship to learn about the diversity of all people and what a wonderful opportunity we have to interact with all sorts of people and learn about them as people — not as lifestyles. Yes, I do have prejudices — I am prejudice against people like Mr. Svehla and while he may want gay people to go back into their closets, I would wish bigots like him would go back under their respective rocks.

Marriage Not Easy

Dear Editor,

In regard to David Crum's column in the Oct. 12 Gateway, "Weddings Are Mistakes," I believe he was unfair in condemning the whole concept of marriage based on one unfortunate incident.

I consider marriage to be a covenant made between a man and a woman before God, willingly shared with friends, both as witnesses to the covenant and participants in the joy of the married couple. Those in attendance are hardly "gawkers."

I also think that the dollar dance at the reception has its purposes: to give the newly married couple an often times much needed financial boost, and to allow the bride and groom to personally greet guests and thank them for coming.

No one ever said marriage was easy. It takes two people who are truly committed to staying together even, and especially, through the rough times. Anyone who is wondering the very next day if he/she made a mistake, or can barely remember the next morning what happened the night before, obviously didn't enter into marriage with a great deal of consideration which it requires. In my opinion no "alternative" to marriage could serve as such a strong witness to the community that there are people who take this commitment very seriously.

On Saturday, more than 100 people took part in a Red Ribbon Walk and Rally held at Elmwood Park. Representatives from LIFT-UP II and PRIDE-Omaha were there to support a drug-free America. Mayor P. J. Morgan attended to show his support for the battle against drugs.

"The red ribbons stand for people against drinking and driving," said Jane Johnson, program assistant for LIFT-UP II.

Drinking will be LIFT-UP II's main focus for this year, said Lattanzi.

"Everything we do, we will try to relate it to drinking and driving," Lattanzi said. "That has been such a problem in the last few years."

Nebraska is also cracking down on drinking and driving. As of January, the state began operating under the Administration License Revocation (ALR), a law that allows police officers to take a drunk driver's license on the spot. The new law also increased jail time and implemented stricter punishment for driving while intoxicated.

LIFT-UP II randomly surveyed UNO students about their experiences with alcohol. Approximately 68 percent of males and 58 percent of females surveyed said they suffered poor classroom performances resulting from drinking. About 25 percent of males and 17 percent of females said they missed class because of drinking.

Tuesday's seminar in the Omaha Room at the Student Center will discuss "How to Help a Friend with a Drinking Problem." It will be presented by UNO student April Donovan.

"April is very interested in helping students who may have drinking problems," Lattanzi said.

Wednesday, the program will feature a "Recovery Productions" one-act play, "Life on the Rocks," in the Eppley Auditorium. Characters Hopps and Barley will examine some problems faced by people from alcoholic and dysfunctional families. Following the play, there will be time for discussion.

African-Americans will also have an opportunity to learn more about an issue that has been strongly analyzed, the amount of alcohol advertising done in black communities. In a seminar Thursday, Fred Wright will present a seminar on "Marketing Booze to Blacks," in the Student Center's Gallery Room. Wright is expected to show how advertising and industry target different groups of people.

"I've seen it, and Wright's presentation is something that everyone can learn from," said Lattanzi. "It's amazing how the alcohol industry targets certain groups."

Friday will feature "Quizzes and Cream," where students can get free ice cream if they answer three alcohol and drug awareness questions correctly. Lattanzi said this is usually fun and educational for participating students.

LIFT-UP II will continue to plan ways to educate students, faculty and staff on drug and alcohol abuse. In December, the program will sponsor "Red Ribbon Week," where students will be shown firsthand how drinking affects driving.

The program also assists faculty members on educating their students on alcohol abuse.

"We don't preach to anyone," Lattanzi said. "We just want people to know we are here to assist students."

Lattanzi encouraged students wishing to learn more to come to the LIFT-UP II office in Room 308 of the College of Business Administration.

Campus Pimps Arrested in Ring

Tucson, Ariz. (CPS) — Three University of Arizona students were arrested for allegedly running a prostitution ring near the campus and employing college-age women, according to the Daily Wildcat.

It was undetermined whether the women involved in the ring were UA students, the campus newspaper reported. According to police reports, a 19-year-old woman who was employed by Elite Escort Service agreed to have sex for money with an undercover police officer at a hotel near the Tucson International Airport.

Thomas Carl Watson, 21, a psychology sophomore, Sean Robert Delahunty, 22, a creative writing senior and a disc jockey at the campus radio station, and Milo John Kaciak, 19, a sophomore, were arrested at a house near the campus in late September. They were charged with pandering and receiving the earnings of a prostitute, officials said.

The arrests took place after police investigated an advertisement reading, "Elite Escort Service featuring Lauren, Nicky & Veronica. Noon-3 a.m. Large selection. Reas. rate." the ad was published in The Arizona Daily Star.

Crime Popular in U.S.

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICES

If you've ever wondered who commits crime on campus, look around. It could be the woman sitting next to you in class, or the guy who lives down the hall in the dormitory. The again, it could be you.

A series of surveys conducted by a UNO criminal justice professor indicate a majority of American students — more than 50 percent — candidly admit to stealing money and property, driving drunk, cheating on tests and vandalizing property, to mention a few crimes.

Results also indicate most students also consider themselves to be good citizens and think "real" criminals should be given harsher punishments for their crimes. The problem isn't confined to the United States. A survey of students in New Zealand produced similar results.

"The students view themselves to be high-minded, law abiding citizens, yet their behavior indicated otherwise," said UNO teacher Chris Eckridge.

In the surveys, 3,417 students at UNO were queried over an eight-year period (1984-91) about whether they ever had committed any of 22 criminal acts. A group of 542 students at the University of Canterbury at Christchurch, New Zealand answered the same questionnaire in March and April 1992. Eckridge compared the data and presented his findings at the annual meeting of the Western Society of Criminology in February.

Statistics adjusted to compensate for differences in age, gender and other factors showed that:

- 58 percent of American students, compared with 57 percent of New Zealanders, admitted stealing less than $10.
- 75 percent of Americans and 50 percent of New Zealand students said they had driven while drunk.

- 81 percent of the Americans and 52 percent of the New Zealanders cheated on a test.
- 53 percent of Americans smoked marijuana, compared with 51 percent of New Zealanders.

- 11 percent of the Americans said they had stolen from their roommates, compared with 9 percent of New Zealanders.
- 20 percent of Americans said they had carried a concealed weapon, while 17 percent of the New Zealanders admitted doing so.

- 20.7 percent of American women students said they had been raped, compared with 17.6 percent of the female New Zealanders. However, only 6.4 percent of the American men students said they had forced a woman to have sex against her will, with 4.7 percent of New Zealand men admitting to the crime.

Eckridge said he found the statistics "extremely disturbing," although he suspected that students of the 80s and 90s just may be more up front about their criminal activity than those of previous generations.

"I don't know if young people are lying and cheating any more than their parents did. It's just that we're more aware of it now," he said.

The statistics Eckridge said he found the most disturbing were ones that indicating "cognitive dissonance" on the part of students who feel that their own criminal behavior is fine, but others' is not.

"What seems to keep the majority of students from being legally defined as criminal seems to be the mere fact that they have not yet been caught and/or convicted," the professor said in the study's conclusion.

Particularly interesting is the difference in responses on the last two questions.

Americans were tougher in their opinion about criminal incidents even though they admitted participating in more criminal incidents — an average of 6.31 out of 22 — compared with an average of 4.85 crimes for the New Zealand students.

"It would appear that American students might be a bit more calloused, have a more inflated image of themselves, and/or are more capable of rationalizing behavior than are New Zealand students," Eckridge wrote.

Although most people consider themselves honest, Eckridge said that everybody cheats a little now and then. Managers take home pens from their office; workers shave and extra 20 minutes from their eight-hour days; parents do their kid's homework.

"The manager of the convenience store embezzles; the kid steals a Twinkie from the store," he said. "People steal in ways that are available to them."

Eckridge should know. Before becoming a college professor, he worked in the white-collar crime division of an attorney general's office, so the results of the surveys, weren't entirely surprising.

"It's disheartening, and it's troublesome... But is there any difference between the robber barons of the 1880's and the robber barons of the 1980s? They get away with it; kids see that.

"Isn't that part of the American way? Get away with it... The winners write the rules, not the losers."

The corruption of institutions has given people a sense that they had better take what they can get while the getting is good, he said.

"I think the whole country is moving in that direction. We're a nation of lying, cheating thieves," Eckridge said, noting that the robber baron of the 1700's and 1800's who helped establish the nation are considered heroes today, although many of them basically lied, cheated and stole their way to success.

outreach and research needs of the State of Nebraska, and particularly Omaha, in engineering, engineering technology, and other engineering-related programs? What are the future needs?

• To what extent is the university meeting current needs? Is the university positioned to meet future needs?

Other items of business:

• The regents approved a $30 student fee increase at UNO to help pay for renovation and expansion of the Student Center. The increase goes into effect next fall. They also approved the issuance of roughly 9.3 million in revenue bonds to fund the project.

• The regents also accepted a bid for the renovation of Arts and Sciences Hall. The project would include renovations of the mechanical and electrical systems and theater space.

• The regents will review Nebraska residency policy for tuition purposes. Currently, students can become residents and pay in-state tuition after living in Nebraska for six months.

Skrupa said the regents would be looking at requirements in other states.

known "I am not interested."

Swank said it is very important to state disinterest in a very firm manner.

"Maybe it's part of the male mentality, as wrong as it is, that if I don't get a firm no, maybe they really are interested in me, but they just want me to work harder."

"They need to say so because there have been occasions where they never really said no. That doesn't make it right, but they really never said no and some people just won't take a suggestive no for a no."

Swank stressed that a student should only have to say no once.

"If that doesn't work, then they need to speak to someone who can confront the person and say, 'do you understand what no means? This person has told you no, now that's it or we'll discuss it further.'"

Swank said that students who feel they are being harassed by another student or a faculty member should report the situation to the office of the vice chancellor.

"The university has established policy and there's disciplinary authority for it. The point is the behavior is unwanted, the behavior is addressed in university policy and once the individual has been told and they don't abide by that, then further action can be taken."

The UNO Student Handbook defines sexual harassment as "any communication of a sexual nature ...which has the purpose or effect of intimidating the person receiving the communication or any solicitation of sexual contact of any nature when submission to or rejection of such contact is used as the basis for ...imposing favorable or adverse terms and conditions of employment or academic standing."

Assistant Vice Chancellor of Student Development Services, Mary Mudd said that a student must first file a written statement before a formal inquiry can be made.

"We have an informal procedure and a formal procedure, so when a student comes to me, I make sure they have a copy of the handbook and we review what the policy says," Mudd said. "I typically listen to what they have to say and then, if they want to do a formal charge, then they will have to write out a statement saying what happened. That way we're all clear on what issues they're bringing forth."

Rita Henry, assistant to the vice chancellor of educational and student services, said that student to student harassment complaints are normally handled by her office through the disciplinary process while students wishing to report faculty harassment should contact Student Development Services.

According to the Student Handbook, if the vice chancellor determines that the facts substantiate the charges, one of four formal actions may be taken: written reprimand, disciplinary probation, suspension or expulsion.

Swank said if a student is being harassed and is unsure of what steps to take, Campus Security is always available to lend assistance.

"If it involves an unwanted touching or something, a sexual assault or if the person feels threatened by another person, not necessarily sexual, but if the person has threatened to harm them for whatever reason, then we would try to interdict and find out what the situation is and refer it to the vice chancellor."

"Students can always come to Campus Security and we'll get them to the right place."

Ong Is Ready Join KYNE Television Staff

UNO's television station KYNE has a new addition. Marleen Ong has joined the KYNE staff as a producer and host for a new Omaha public affairs program.

A native of Arizona and graduate of Arizona State University, Ong came to UNO from WPSX-TV, the PBS affiliate at Pennsylvania State University. Ong served as producer/host at the Penn State station for four years. Recently, she produced an Emmy Award winning documentary on Frank Lloyd Wright that was narrated by actor Martin Sheen.

Ong

"I wanted to move on to a more challenging role and to get into a larger market that put more emphasis on public affairs and news," she said. "I also wanted to concentrate on issues and bring them to the community, which I believe I can do here in Omaha. By raising issues and focusing on alternative solutions, we can impact peoples' lives."

UNO's new public affairs program "LIVING in Omaha" will premiere Thursday. Ong will serve as both producer and on-air host for the weekly program, which will incorporate studio and roundtable discussion, interviews and features.

Applications Available For Kiewit Awards

The Peter Kiewit Foundation will again sponsor an award program to recognize excellence in classroom teaching.

The Foundation's 1994 Teacher Achievement Awards will be given to 20 teachers statewide who distinguish themselves through their innovative curriculum development, outstanding instructional technique or successful motivation of students.

Applications for the award are available from the Peter Kiewit Foundation.

Continuing Studies to Offer New Course

"Benchmarking Workshop" is a new non-credit course from UNO's College of Continuing Studies. The course shows how to identify winning practices of top-performing businesses and learn from the success of others.

The workshop will meet from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. on Oct. 26 and 27 at UNO's Peter Kiewit Conference Center, 1313 Farnam.

For more information or to register call UNO's College of Continuing Studies at 595-2308.

Jackrabbits Jump All Over Mavericks

By TIM ROHWER

The South Dakota State Jackrabbits scored three touchdowns in less than two minutes in the second quarter and went on to rout the UNO football team, 50-10, Saturday in North Central Conference (NCC) action.

The loss dropped the Mavericks to a 2-5 overall and 1-4 in the NCC, while the Jackrabbits boosted their record to 4-3 overall and 3-2 in the NCC.

Jackrabbits' quarterback Todd McDonald proved to be the difference, throwing five touchdowns in the first half. He also completed 15 of 25 passes for 243 yards in the game.

"McDonald has been getting better every week, and I think he is up there in the national rankings," UNO Coach Tom Mueller said. "Although, I think it was a combination of us not being good and that he was a good quarterback. We did have some coverage breakdowns."

McDonald was hot from the start throwing a 37-yard scoring pass to split end Matt Beier in the first quarter. Unfortunately for the Mavs, McDonald was just warming up.

During the second quarter, McDonald threw a 23-yard scoring toss to halfback Dan Nelson, a 39-yard score to Beier, and two touchdown passes to split end Mike Myers.

Myers' receptions, covering 28 and 31 yards, came after the Jackrabbits intercepted a pass from Mav quarterback Josh Luedtke and recovered a UNO fumble on a kick return.

Mueller said those two touchdowns, which jumped the Jackrabbits' lead to 40-3, were probably the key plays of the game.

"We did some things well at the start, but I think those plays were the killer," he said. "Even if you are down 17-3 or 20-3, you still have a chance to come back. But when it's 40-3, it changes the whole ball game."

South Dakota State's placekicker Adam Vinatieri was also busy in the first half kicking four extra points and two field goals of 41 and 24 yards.

The Mavs' only score in the first half came on a 39-yard field goal by junior placekicker Brian Ruch.

UNO, which was already thin in the running department, lost running back Lamont White in the first quarter when he reinjured his left thigh.

The senior from Bolingbrook, Ill., suffered the injury when tackled by Jackrabbits' defensive back Mike Jaunich and did not return.

"Actually, our running game wasn't too bad at the start, but you could tell Lamont's leg was bothering him," Mueller said. "He didn't practice all week because of his thigh, and I don't think he should have played."

—File Photo

UNO's Lamont White, No. 32, suffered a thigh injury in Saturday's game against South Dakota State and is doubtful for this week's game.

Mueller said White is doubtful for UNO's next game Saturday against the North Dakota Fighting Sioux.

It was the second straight week the Mavs lost a starting running back. The previous Saturday against Morningside, sophomore Maurad Cave suffered a season-ending knee injury.

The Jackrabbits added 10 points in the third quarter on Vinatieri's third field goal of the game and a 2-yard run by Scott Sievers.

UNO's only touchdown came with just 14 seconds left in the game when Luedtke threw an 8-yard pass to senior wide receiver Todd Hurt.

The Jackrabbit defense held UNO to only 61 yards on the ground, though Luedtke did throw for 226 yards on 20 completions.

It was his most productive game of the season and the second straight

Soccer Team Nets Victory

By TIM ROHWER

The Cornhuskers were not the only Nebraska team to beat a Kansas school on the athletic field this weekend.

While the University of Nebraska-Lincoln (UNL) beat Kansas State 45-28 in football Saturday, the UNO men's soccer club beat Wichita State, 2-1, Sunday.

Steve Foerstel scored both UNO goals as they overcame a one-goal deficit in the second half.

In an exhibition match Saturday, UNO lost to York, 4-3.

Sunday's win improved UNO's record in the Midwest Conference of the National Collegiate Club Soccer Association to 2-2-1.

Other members in the conference, include Wichita, UNL, Kansas State and Kansas.

The Mavs next event will be the Jayhawk Tournament in Kansas on Oct. 30 and 31.

"The winner of that tournament, as well as the conference champion will go to the nationals at Tempe, Ariz., in late November," said member Alan Sortino. "We have a good chance of going to the nationals. We haven't been blown out by anybody."

Even if UNO goes to nationals, Sortino said the Mavs would never play Creighton, the nation's No. 1 team in the NCAA Division I, unless the sport becomes sanctioned by the administration.

"It would be like Nebraska playing Nebraska Wesleyan in football," he said. "Besides, I don't think the NCAA would allow them to play a club team."

Sortino said Creighton's success could help UNO's program in the future.

"Creighton's program has surely helped to recognize soccer in the Midwest," he said. "It surely has risen more interest in the sport."

Mav Runners Fare Well

By TIM ROHWER

The UNO women's cross-country team had one current member and a former member place in the top 20 out of 95 participants in a meet at the University of South Dakota Saturday.

The 5,000-meter race allowed former college runners to run unattached of any school.

Barb Keefover, a member of UNO's indoor team who has completed her eligibility for cross-country, finished 16th as an unattached entry. Jennifer Kennedy came in 17th as the highest UNO finisher.

Approximately 16 teams participated in the meet, including

Doane College, ranked No. 2 in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, and Augustana, ranked No. 18 in the NCAA Division II. There was no team scoring.

Other UNO finishers included Janine Ramaekers, 28th; Heather Haines, 36th; Mary Ann Wieberg, 37th; Billie Jo Antisdel, 51st.

UNO Coach Tim Hendricks said the meet was a good warm-up for the next event Friday at Augustana, though the team could have run better.

"For Jennifer, it wasn't one of her best runs, although I think she will run a little bit quicker in the next meet. And, Billie Jo didn't feel well," Hendricks said. "Nobody really ran well. The course was flat, but the ground was rough. It was out in the middle of a cornfield."

Illness forced one of his runners out of the event, Hendricks added.

"Amy Molczyk had strep throat, and even though she made the trip, we decided not to run her," he said. "She has been our No. 3 or 4 runner."

Hendricks said he wasn't surprised the meet was a non-scoring event, even though it was a scoring meet for many years.

"If they would have scored points, the University of South Dakota would have finished last," he said. "That's the way it's been the last two years, and South Dakota hasn't had good teams the last two years."

Hendricks said his middle runners need to improve before the conference meet on Nov. 7 at Brookings, S.D.

"Our No. 2, 3 and 4 runners need to push themselves closer together," he said. "They have got to mentally keep pushing themselves. They have to get out of the comfort zone and start punishing themselves. If they feel comfortable for 15 minutes, then they're not running hard enough."

Lady Mavs Bag Two Wins

By TIM ROHWER

The UNO women's volleyball team went hunting for some victories up north last week and bagged a couple as it beat Augustana and South Dakota State.

The Lady Mavs, ranked No. 12 in the NCAA Division II, beat No. 22 Augustana in Sioux Falls, S.D., Thursday 14-16, 15-7, 15-9, 15-7, and the Jackrabbits in Brookings, S.D., Friday 15-9, 15-9, 15-13.

The two wins improved the Lady Mavs record to 14-5 overall and 3-3 in the North Central Conference (NCC).

Senior outside hitter Laura Monahan had 16 kills against Augustana, while junior outside Kevin Campbell added 15 as the Mavs overcame an early one-game deficit.

UNO Coach Rose Shires said she is impressed with Campbell's play.

"Kevin has really taken on more of a leadership role," she said.

Throughout most of the contest, the Mavs were without senior right side hitter Laura Kelly who had a hip injury. They compensated well, though, Monahan said.

"We had Michele Highland (UNO's middle blocker) at the right side because she knows that position well," Monahan said. "Michele played that position in the spring when Laura was setting, and she played well against Augustana."

Augustana fell to 17-8 overall and 2-3 in the NCC.

The Lady Mavs had it easy against the Jackrabbits until the third game when the

Talent From Out of State Mavs Benefit From Florida Players

By BRIAN HUSTON

It seems the state of Florida is a keg of talent when it comes to producing great high school football players.

This is evident by the recent domination of college football by Florida, Florida State and Miami universities, which recruit mostly in-state for their players.

Now, UNO is apparently trying to tap into this vast supply of talent.

Three players on this year's Mav roster come from the Sunshine State, including Maurad Cave, the team's top rusher until injuring his knee in last Saturday's loss to Morningside.

The other two Florida players are freshman defensive end Chris Garrison and sophomore center Dante Garrido.

Both attended Spanish River High School in Boca Raton, Fla., yet both had different reasons for coming to UNO.

"It wasn't really a hard decision," Garrison said. "When I came up here on a visit, I was real happy with the coaching staff. I knew this is where I wanted to go."

Garrido said this was a great opportunity to get the best of both worlds.

"To get an education was the main reason for coming here," he said. "I also wanted to go out of state, to see something different."

Will this trail to Florida continue?

"There are good players in Florida," said Gary Anderson, UNO sports information director. "But I can't say there is a trend to recruit only Florida players."

"We signed four kids in Broward County (in Florida) two years ago," Coach Tom Mueller said. "We didn't go back this last year. We really didn't have that much out-of-state money available."

Offensive Coordinator Chuck Osberg said UNO, for the most part, does not focus on players from the eastern or southeastern portions of the country.

"We put a heavy emphasis on recruiting as close to home as possible," he said. "We start in Nebraska, then go to Iowa and then to other surrounding states."

Local recruits may even have the same talent, Garrison said.

"People are always saying Florida players are better," he said. "The competition is just as hard here, if not harder."

Florida players may still come to UNO in the future.

"Florida has millions of people and only three NCAA Division I schools," Osberg said.

"There's so much talent and there's no place for them to go," Mueller added.

home team overcame an 11-6 deficit to lead 13-11.

But UNO, led by Kelly who was back in the lineup, scored the final four points to sweep the unranked Jackrabbits.

"We made a few errors in the game and State got on a roll with their serving," Monahan said of the Jackrabbit comeback. "But we got a key kill and the momentum changed."

Kelly led UNO with 16 kills, and added five digs and two service aces. Monahan had 12 kills, while Campbell had nine.

South Dakota State fell to 14-7 overall and 3-2 in the NCC.

Monahan said, despite the sweep, the Lady Mavs did not play well.

"We had a long day waiting for the match and I think we were tired," she said. "We were geared to play Augustana, and we were tired to play the next night. South Dakota State was a good team, but we were better and I think it showed."

The Lady Mavs return home this weekend to play St. Cloud State on Friday at 7 p.m. and Mankato State on Saturday at 6 p.m.

Last Saturday, St. Cloud beat nationally-ranked North Dakota State.

"They are an excellent team," Monahan said. "They have great blockers and are very tall. They have a height advantage on us."

week he has thrown for more than 200 yards.

"Josh threw the ball well, but we're still dropping too many passes," Mueller said.

The touchdown catch by Hurt was his third of the season. Sophomore John Medley led the Mavs in receiving against South Dakota State with six catches for 70 yards.

The Jackrabbits offense had 439 total yards which impressed Mueller.

"Offensively, they're very good and they score a lot of points," he said. "And defensively, we made a couple of mental mistakes which, after that, we lost our aggressiveness. After awhile, they sort of hampered us."

North Dakota, which plays UNO at Al Caniglia Field Saturday at 7 p.m., was ranked fourth in the NCAA Division II before a 20-7 upset by Augustana last weekend.

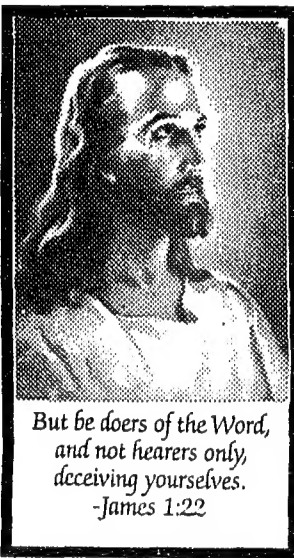

"They're awfully good," Mueller said. "Their running back, Shannon Burnell, is closing in on the all-time conference rushing record."
